

About the Workshop

The workshop introduces some of the more complex aspects of declarer play, but in an easy-to-follow format.

- Some suits are better left for the defenders to lead. Forcing the opponents to lead a particular suit requires some preparation in the early play. The workshop will show you how to plan and execute ‘end plays.’
- Declarer’s primary objective is to make the contract. The odds of making the contract can sometimes be improved with careful handling of a particular suit, perhaps at the cost of making one or more overtricks. Examples of opportunities for such ‘safety plays’ will be part of the workshop.
- Most declarers learn to count trumps at an early stage. However, experts count a lot more things: winners, losers, points, distribution. The workshop will show how to count and how such information can be of value to improve your play of the hand.

A REMINDER

All Better Bridge festivals focus on one part of the game while giving a general brush up on bidding, play, and defense.
